Hi Shaun.

Now that the CO UC JIC has stood down, SJBH has staff & resources back to commit to our usual local public health role, i.e. "sense-maker" of human & env health conditions or concerns.

We met with Nancy Grantham and Patti Tyler to present plan to allow SJBH to effectively communicate comprehensive response to incident, past & future, as it relates to human & env health in LP county:

It's an extension of the lay 'river open-close decision matrix by end-user' with new columns for

- Crisis response & communications (period of river closure)
- Risk-communications for current mid-term response & then future long-term response or recovery
- Trigger points for future actions--by type--, e.g. exceedance XXX requires YYY follow up & risk communications, while ZZZ triggers return to crisis response & communications.

Boxes aren't all complete; at this point it's a tool to organize thinking. Nancy & Patti committed to following up next week (... tho it's a little unclear how, there's some ORD? resource that needs to be on ground first... ?) .

Questions: Do you support this role for local public health? And, rather than designing our own tool to track pieces, is there some place we should look for one?

Thanks.
